

GLAMOUR

Good Morning, Dolls! (Also, An AMAZING 1920's-Style Jazz Lawn Party...)

Monday, 09/15/2008

Hello, my sweets! I hope you all had lovely weekends. Alex and I went to the Jazz-Age Lawn Party in New York, where everyone dressed in 1920's style and danced the Charleston to a big brass band. There were vintage motorcars and a pie contest. We were so inspired! (The only catch? We had no idea how to dance like that! I want to take lessons this winter.) See the dancing photos after the jump...

The jazz crooner with an old-school microphone.

They looked so happy and were so much fun to watch.

Two girls hit the dance floor...

Loved all the cute kicks and jazz hands...

Gorgeous 1920's hair styles -- wouldn't you love to do these yourself this fall?

A cute couple watching the dancing...

Tubas!

A pie contest, including "mom's best" and "hobo's choice."

Bill Cunningham, the New York Times street-style photographer (who is about 10,000 years old but seems so energetic) captures the scene.

Don't you love this whole scene, my sweets? Would it be great to have a 1920's-style wedding?! Do you guys know how to dance the Charleston? Have you ever taking dancing lessons? Are they worth the money? Mark your calendars for the Jazz-Age Lawn Party next June...xoxo
